APPENDIX A

1. Source: The Wright-Patt Credit Union (WPCU) and Wright State University’s (Wright State) partnership began in April 1973 with an on-campus credit union member center. Both organizations have experienced significant growth during the partnership. During this time, the overarching missions of each organization have remained the same: making a difference in the lives of the students and families we serve, and serving our communities.

The WPCU was established in 1932 during the days of the great depression. A handful of local workers at Wright Field had the idea to pool their money to help each other out in tough times. That turned out to be a well-conceived idea, and the WPCU was born. Today, WPCU has grown to serve approximately 275,000 members and continues to help people keep more of their hard-earned money and make it grow.

Both organizations have a vested interest in the communities we serve. Both organizations are community-based and not profit-driven. As local and community-based organizations, neither WPCU nor Wright State can be bought or sold. Further, because we are local, we earn our livelihood by directly serving our friends and neighbors. As a result, the success of the communities we serve is our top priority.

The pledge made by WPCU is pursuant to, and conditioned upon, the execution of a Master Agreement by and between WPCU and WSU, which in part reflects WSU’s recognition of WPCU as the “Official Financial Institution for the Wright State University Community” as that term is defined in the Master Agreement. The future of our community is heavily dependent on having a knowledgeable workforce with skills that provide them with lifelong employment opportunities. This five-year pledge made by the WPCU is committed in support of Wright State’s comprehensive campaign, and is directed to supporting needs-based scholarships and other student-focused programming. Any scholarships awarded pursuant to this agreement shall recognize Wright-Patt Credit Union as the source of the scholarship funds.

Other members of both organizations may serve on the committee. A portion of the WPCU annual pledge will be held back to meet these requests.
