

Effective the 2012-2013 aid year, the Federal Pell Grant program has a maximum lifetime limit of 12 semesters (or its equivalent). You can access the National Student Loan Data System (NSLDS) and view your record online with your FSA ID. Your NSLDS record will display all the federal student loans and grants you have received. Students have the right to decline Pell Grant funds during the academic year to preserve eligibility for future enrollment periods.

If you wish to decline or return all or part of a Federal Pell Grant disbursement that you are otherwise eligible to receive, you must submit this completed form to Enrollment Services. You may decline the Federal Pell Grant funds for one or more semesters within the current aid year.

Once the form is received, the Office of Financial Aid will update the Federal Pell Grant amount. You will receive an e-mail notification to your Wright State University e-mail address once the adjustment has been processed
