Section 2: Assessment Plan

Course Outcomes (See 1, 2, and 3 on Instruction sheet)

1. Critically describe some of the political, social, economic, or cultural systems or practices around the world.
2. Demonstrate awareness and compare diverse traditions both locally and around the world.
3. Use economic knowledge to evaluate contemporary issues.

Assignments (Select the appropriate assessments for all three outcomes – see 4 on the instruction sheet)

Written assignment that addresses outcome(s) _____. Title _____

Written test or exam essay question for outcome(s) 1, 2, 3. Provide the question(s) below.

Please note: Students will be asked to answer one of the following questions.

1. Consider “American-style healthcare is literally killing Greeks.” (1, 2, 3)

A. Shortly before the publication of this article, Greece had a major economic crisis, which in many respects is still ongoing. The author quotes an unnamed doctor saying about very sick but treatable patients, “If we could just get them for a few days in the hospital we could save them, but...” Presumably most doctors, and indeed most Greeks overall, feel equally frustrated about Greece’s health-care circumstances. Given that most if not all people there see health-care provision as extremely valuable, and Greece is a fairly wealthy country, why don’t people just build more clinics and hospitals, and why aren’t the machinery and personnel needed to run them provided? (I do not ask this question to taunt, but to elicit reflection on why health-care services that everyone seems to think are desirable in the abstract nonetheless are not necessarily forthcoming.)

B. How if at all does the article provide reasons for his characterization that it is “American-style” healthcare that is to blame for Greece’s health problems? Is that a helpful term in understanding those problems?

2. Consider “Desperate for slumber in Delhi, homeless encounter a sleep mafia.” (1, 2, 3)

A. What scarce resources are needed to provide the services described in the article? What do you think their opportunity costs might be?

B. What of value is being provided to those who buy the services, relative to the available alternatives?

C. A researcher quoted in the article says, referring to the “sleep mafia,” that “they are exploiting [their customers]. There is a slew of public policies that are supposed to bypass this kind of exploitation.” Define “exploitation” in such a way that means the government is justified in trying to prevent exploitation by this definition. By this definition explain, given the available alternatives, whether what people like Mr. Khan are doing qualifies as “exploitation.”

3. Consider “Iraqi families sell organs to overcome poverty.” (1, 2, 3)

A. A person who has been convicted for being a kidney trafficker is quoted as saying “I used to look at it as a humanitarian cause, but after a few months in this trade I started questioning the morality – mostly because of the miserable conditions of the organ sellers. It broke my heart seeing young people doing this for money.” Does removing from such poor people the option to legally sell one of their kidneys leave them better off? Does it make people who need kidney transplants better off?

B. The article indicates that the law in Iraq prohibits selling of kidneys, instead only allowing donations by relatives. All laws impose costs on some people of course. What is the cost of this law, and what groups of people bear it?

Multiple Choice Marker questions – 3 to 4 questions per outcome. List the outcome and question numbers.
