Important Financial Aid Information
Spring Semester 2019

Financial Aid Recalculations
Financial aid must go through a recalculation process any time you add or drop classes or change your enrollment status during the 100% tuition refund period. This federally mandated recalculation process adjusts your federal, state, and institutional financial aid to reflect your new enrollment status.

☑️ If you have a class or classes that are canceled by the university and you are not able to substitute another class or classes during this semester, the university will refund your tuition for that class or classes during the 100% refund period. Your financial aid will be recalculated to reflect your new enrollment status. If the recalculation of financial aid results in you owing a balance to the university, the university will pay the balance owed. Please pay close attention to your financial aid awards by logging into WINGS Express, and checking your WSU email account. We will notify you of updates via WSU email.

☑️ If you have a class or classes that are canceled by the university after the 100% tuition refund period, and you are unable to register for a substitute course for spring semester, the university may allocate funds to you to pay for that class or classes during summer, fall, or spring semester next academic year (2019-2020). The Office of Financial Aid will maintain records of any available funding you may receive and will apply it to your account when you re-register for the course or courses that were canceled during spring semester 2019. Please pay close attention to your financial aid awards by logging into WINGS Express, and checking your WSU email account. We will notify you of updates via WSU email.

☑️ If you are enrolled in a class that is being taught by a new instructor, and you choose to drop the course, you will not receive any type of university assistance to pay a balance owed to the university.

Withdrawing From All Classes

☑️ If all your classes are canceled by the university, your aid will go through the federally mandated Return of Title IV (R2T4) refund calculation process. If you owe a balance to the university, the university will pay the balance owed. Please pay close attention to your financial aid awards by logging into WINGS Express, and checking your WSU email account. We will notify you of updates via WSU email.

☑️ If you choose to drop your entire course schedule, your financial aid will go through the federally mandated Return of Title IV (R2T4) refund calculation process. You will not receive any type of university assistance to pay a balance owed to the university. Please pay close attention to your financial aid awards by logging into WINGS Express, and checking your WSU email account. We will notify you of updates via WSU email.

Satisfactory Academic Progress (SAP)
Any time you drop or add classes, you could affect your SAP status for federal financial aid eligibility. Please check your SAP status at the end of spring semester in WINGS. If you have an unsatisfactory status, you will need to complete the appeal process to regain your aid eligibility.

☑️ The appeal process is a federally required process to ensure that the Office of Financial Aid knows you will get back on track academically to receive future financial aid. The Office of Financial Aid will be as lenient as possible when reviewing appeals related to the quantitative (credit hours earned) aspect of the SAP status, but we cannot guarantee that your appeal will receive automatic approval.

☑️ We recommend you understand the SAP requirements and appeal process by reviewing our website: http://www.wright.edu/raiderconnect/financial-aid/satisfactory-academic-progress

Academic Performance Scholarship Renewal (APS)
The scholarship renewal requirement related to credit hour achievement is waived for this academic year, only. You do not need to notify the Scholarship Team within the Office of Financial Aid of changes to your schedule for the spring semester. The Scholarship Team will only review your GPA for renewal consideration for this year. The renewal criteria will return to a credit hour and GPA review for next academic year, 2019-2020.
