From the President’s Report

Dr. Hopkins invited everyone to attend the first presidential lecture series of 2017 featuring Ban Rhee, former long-standing President of South Korea’s 4.5 million students. We will be hearing about the challenges and opportunities created by the shift in demographics. We will start with a topic of interest to all of us, and the future is greatly dependent upon the goals and priorities that we establish during this time.

We also discussed that the university must accommodate the possibility of the upcoming budget revisions and how this could impact the university’s financial status. The administration is working with the Foundation to explore potential funding opportunities, such as a $2.5 million investment return over a five-year period. This will allow the university to allocate funds to support critical initiatives and projects.

The President’s Office has already begun the process of allocating funds to support critical initiatives and projects.
