

Does the Media Cover Cover the Economy Fairly?

And Does it Matter?

Guest Speaker: Amanda Parks

Penn State University

Friday, October 2 at 11:15am

154 Rike Hall

Amanda Parks is a doctoral candidate at Pennsylvania State University. Her research and teaching interests are centered around public opinion and political communication, with a particular focus on the institutional reasons for media distortions and its effect on citizens' evaluations of policies and candidates. Other research interests include deliberative citizen engagement and the effects of new media on political communication. Amanda is a proud Ohio native and earned her B.S. in Journalism at Bowling Green State University, as well as an M.A. in political science from Penn State.

Her paper (with Jeffrey Peake), "Presidential Pseudo Events and the Media Coverage they Receive," appeared in the American Review of Politics.

*For more information visit Dr. Hannah in 317 Millett or email lee.hannah@wright.edu

Sponsored by the Wright State Department of Political Science and open to all.