

The Center for Faculty Excellence will be hosting a Teaching for Student Success Symposium on the afternoon of Wednesday, August 17. Please save the date now and plan to attend this on-campus event that will provide information, motivation, and new ways to think about teaching your students as you prepare for a new semester.

The organizers of the symposium are now accepting session proposals from individuals or groups from the WSU community. These sessions may include:

- workshops - about 45 minutes and participants will engage in some type of activity,
- round tables - about 25 minutes – presenters will discuss their topic for 5-10 minutes and participants will ask questions and discuss the topic for the remainder of the time, and
- speed learning - about 5-10 minutes to present, the session is repeated multiple times.

If you have an idea to share with others about student success, please complete the application form by May 6. We expect to let applicants know if their proposal is accepted for the symposium by the end of June. We encourage everyone to propose a session on any topic related to excellence in teaching and student success. This year, we are particularly interested in proposals that address assessment (as pertains to accreditation), technology in our post-pandemic world, diversity and equity, and data-supported educational research.

Contact Peggy Kelly, Faculty Fellow for Pedagogy, in the Center for Faculty Excellence at peggy.kelly@wright.edu with any questions. More information will be coming throughout the summer – watch your Wright State email and check out the website.