

DISCUSSION:

Faculty Work in Progress

September 2, 2022 * 3:30-4:30pm
Center for Faculty Excellence, 023 Dunbar Library

free & open to faculty, students, staff, & the public

Dr. Sean Pollock welcomes your feedback on his in-progress paper, "How to Die for Rus": The Afterlives of Prince Peter Bagration between Russian Empire and Nation

Professor Pollock's current research focuses on the history and memory of the Russian campaign of 1812, which Russians have ever since called the Patriotic War. Specifically, he is interested in the ways that individuals and institutions have used memories of Prince Petr Ivanovich Bagration (pronounced ba-gra-ti-ON), a Russian general who died from complications related to wounds received during the battle of Borodino, to advance claims about Russian empire and nation between 1812 and 2012.

Following the discussion of Professor Pollock's paper, the School of Humanities and Cultural Studies will host a social hour at The Wandering Griffin.

For a digital copy of Professor Pollock's paper, please email Professor Pollock at sean.pollock@wright.edu. Hard copies may be picked up in 470 Millett.